

Poetry Series

Jessica Golden
- poems -

Publication Date:
2008

Publisher:
Poemhunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive

Jessica Golden(August 19,1995)

So I haven't written in a quite a while... Shredded all my poems out of fret and man do I regret it. But, all and all I'm turning the pages to the back cover of someone else's book.. to take out an ink pad and a nice sheet of paper.. to begin writing a book of my own.

Alone In My Corner

Don't bother me now,
Alone in this corner,
Don't bother me now,
Though I long for a partner.

Don't bother me now,
Afraid to face the wide open,
Don't bother me now,
I'm safest here in my heaven.

My thoughts keep me company,
For I'm not so alone,
But a presence of a sweet, kind folk,
Would be great to be known.

Don't bother me now,
Though I wish that you would.
But the walls surround me,
Like a cabin of wood.

Very vulnerable,
In a way that it could,
Burst into flames,
Welcoming anyone it should.

For no one is welcome,
In my lonely corner.
When I long for some accompaniment,
My fear overcomes.

I've been hurt once before,
And no longer am I,
Vulnerable for the evil,
That remains in your lie.

Jessica Golden